EMIRATI RESTAURANTS

Emirati cuisine has its roots in Bedouin camps that dotted the nation. While staying true to those nomadic flavours, it has developed into the modern fare served across the country today.

Over time, traditional Bedouin cuisine has become infused with spices and ingredients from neighbouring countries like Oman and Saudi Arabia and trading partners from India to Persia to Morocco.

The heritage themed buffet is a popular choice for most diners, but the fish-market style offering is a real treat. A traditional fishing boat, filled with a selection of fresh fish on ice such as sea bream and king prawns, greets you at the entrance. You simply make your selection and then watch as the chefs grill it for you on the spot.
